Overview

The Lower Dolpo Trek is often overshadowed due to its challenging topography. However, if adventure, staying away from the beaten trek, and hidden gems are what you are looking for, then look no further! The major part of the Lower Dolpo Trekking route lies in the Shey Phoksundo National Park in western Nepal.

Located in the remote mid-western region of Nepal, the traces of vehicles here are rare as no road connection has yet been able to connect Dolpa. Trekkers were only introduced to this trekking route in the late 1980s. Since then, it has been on the bucket list of hardcore trekkers who come to the Dolpo region to explore the new Himalayan culture and the entire human civilization of this high altitude.

Dolpo Trek

The Dolpo region protects the Bon religions of traditional Tibetan culture, so trekking here allows you to witness a wildly different way of life. As well as culture, you will experience incredible flora and fauna as you scale the region's mountains and visit the Shey Phoksundu National Park – the most extensive and only trans-Himalayan national park in Nepal. Here you will see many endangered animals and birds, along with one of the best examples of a well-preserved ecosystem of plants and wildlife on the planet.

Lower Dolpo Circuit Trek

You will also visit the sacred Shey Phoksundo Lake, Nepal's most profound and second-largest lake. This beautiful turquoise lake is a true highlight of a journey with magnificent landscapes, mountain views, rivers, water springs, flat-roofed houses, shortens, and monasteries—the snowy peaks of the Kanjoroba and Dhaulagiri ranges and spectacular views of the lower Dolpa valley.

We operate The Lower Dolpo Trek in both groups and private tours. As with all our treks, we offer a fully customizable itinerary, with personalized travel and accommodation plans available upon request. So if you want to know more about the itinerary options, trek cost, trek difficulty, or anything else, please don't hesitate to get in touch with a friendly member of our team. Or, if you would like to read about what it's like to experience this adventure, check out our Lower Dolpo Trek Blog.

You can also choose from Upper Mustang Trek, Kanchenjunga Trek, and several other exquisite options.

FAQs

How can I get to Dolpo from Kathmandu?

The most appropriate and budget-friendly way to reach Dolpo from Nepal is to drive to Nepalgunj from Kathmandu. From Nepalgunj, you can get a morning flight to Jhupal. From Jhupal, you can go to Dolpo in one single day.

Can I trek to Dolpo Nepal Solo?

No, foreigners aren't allowed to trek in Dolpo solo. Since Lower Dolpo falls within the few restricted regions in Nepal, independent traveling is not allowed here. This means you must be in a group of at least two people, and hiring a guide for the Dolpo trek is compulsory.

How challenging is Dolpo Trek?

Well, difficulty is a relative word and varies on personal experiences. The Lower Dolpo trek for 18 days is quite hard for the newbie who has never trekked at a higher altitude. However, in comparison to the very remote and demanding Upper Dolpo trek, wandering only in the lower region is quite comfortable. Also, it's easier than peak climbing in Nepal as there's no need for technical climbing skills.

That said, covering the Dolpo trek distance of more than 100 km and walking 6 to 8 hours daily in difficult mountain terrain is not easy. Thus, one must be prepared physically and mentally for the Dolpo trek. Cardio exercises such as cycling, swimming, jogging, and squats have been helpful in developing your body's strength, thus preparing you for the trip.

What is the highest altitude of Dolpo Trek?

Numa La, at 5,238m, and Baga La Pass, at 5,070m, are among the highest point during the Dolpo trek. This is when air pressure drops to half, and breathing gets tricky. Thus, one must be adequately acclimatized before getting to such a dangerous altitude.

What will happen if I get altitude sickness?

While Nepalgunj is at 150 meters above sea level, we fly directly to Jhupal, which is at the Elevation of 2494m. Now, such height has a severe impact on people's health. Developing symptoms such as shortness of breath, chest pain, headaches, etc., are standard. So, we must climb only 500 meters daily and keep ourselves hydrated. Even then, if you catch altitude sickness, our expert guide at MyEverestTrip shall provide you with appropriate medication. We shall also stop climbing if the symptoms are severe and, if possible, walk down to the lower altitude.

Even after all this, if you still catch altitude sickness, you will be taken back to Kathmandu on a helicopter flight in Nepal. Helicopter evacuation will be arranged by our team but will be covered by your insurance plan.

How long is Dolpo Trek?

Exploring the Lower region of Dolpo takes about two weeks, and the Upper Dolpo trek is longer than 13 weeks. If you plan to trek only up to Numa La Base Camp and then be back, the tour is about 18 days from Kathmandu. However, the trekking days are only 12 days, and the other days are for rest and acclimatization

Is there Wi-Fi/ internet in Dolpo?

Dolpo camping trek comes with significant challenges you might not have thought of. You will not have any electricity unless you have a solar power charger. The network coverage is only available in some villages, and Wi-Fi is not available anywhere.

Additional Information

How can I go to Dolpo, Nepal?

You can get to Dolpo by flight or small bus ( jeep) via trekking.

Dolpo Trek Route 1

Via flight

Flight one: From Kathmandu to Nepalgunj, take 45 mins flight that usually operates in the morning

Flight two: Another morning flight from Nepalgunj to Jumla airport is 25 mins.

From Jumla, you must trek to Dolpo Valley via Maure Langa at 3894m. From there, you can head for Upper Dolpo Trek.

Lower Dolpo Trek Route 2

Another option is to fly to Pokhara (25 mins) from Kathmandu and then from Pokhara to Jomsom. From Jomsom, cross the Jungben La pass.

Dolpo Trek Map Route 3

Fly from Kathmandu to Nepalgunj in the evening and to Talcha airport the following day. Both flights are about 45 mins. From Talcha, you can trek to Gamadi.

Reach Dolpo Via Bus

Route 1

First, take a bus or a small jeep from Kathmandu to Jumla. It takes 14 to 16 hours to reach Jumla. Then, you can walk to Dolpo via Dailekh.

Route 2

Or, you can drive to Nepalgunj, get a small bus to Talubagar via Rari, and reach Dunai in 3 days.

Route 3

You can also get to Beni via Pokhara in 8 hours and then take the Jeep to Takam. From here, you cross the Dhorpatan Hunting Reserve to reach Dunai in 10 days. Well, this is a very long route often not used by tourists.

Note: Upper Dolpo lies far west north of Nepal, and it isn't easy to get here. If comfort and views are the only things that matter to you, you can charter a Helicopter in Nepal to Dolpo. And if adventure is what you seek, it's preferable to trek up to Dolpo.

Dolpo Trek permit

The first thing you should understand about Dolpo Trek is that there are two regions for trekking in Dolpo, i.e. Lower Dolpo and Upper Dolpo. And here, we are only talking about this permit you need for lower Dolpo Trek. If you want to get to Shey Phoksundo, i.e. Upper you, you will need a different kind of permit.

For Lower Dolpo Trek, you need a restricted area permit. The lower Dolpo restricted area permit can only be issued after you book your trek with a trusted travel agency like MyEverestTrip and hire a licensed guide. These permits can be printed from the immigration department in Kathmandu and cost USD 20/per person for a week and USD 5 each day after that. You will not need an Upper Dolpo permit but might have to issue a Shey Phoksundo National Park entry permit from the entry gate.

Best time for Dolpo Trek

Because you get above 5,000 meters in the Dolpo trek, it's evident that this trek cannot be done throughout the year. And sadly, the government or travel agency of Nepal doesn't state this fact clearly. Traveling in lousy weather without proper precaution can be deadly.

Autumn and Spring are the safest time for the Dolpo trek. Autumn, i.e. October and November, is the best time for all tours in Nepal. The clear views of the Himalayas and the festive mood of the Nepalese make it an excellent time for a Visit. On the other hand, Spring, with magical blooms of wildflowers and little chance of rainfall, is also magical. Spring is the best time for mountain climbing in Nepal when many climbers travel to areas like Annapurna and Everest.

Summer and Winter treks in Dolpo can be a bit cheaper. But it's precarious due to the chances of rainfall and snowfall. As the trail gets slippery, it's not the best time for the Dolpo trek. However, since Dolpo receives less rain, the June and July tour might be possible with the proper preparation. But the winter trek in Dolpo from December to February is not suggested. The snow covers the entire area, making it hard to trek. However, the views in winter are unbelievably beautiful. So if you are planning a winter holiday in Nepal, stay at the lower altitude of Dolpo and avoid the high passes.

Accommodation in Dolpo

Despite being remote, there's quite a comfortable accommodation option up to Dho Tarap, the 9th day of the trek. In Kathmandu and Nepalgunj, you will stay in a 3-star hotel with a private bathroom and all luxurious amenities. From Dunai, we stay in tea houses, basically local guest houses in Dolpo with basic accommodation. There are 3-4 hotels in Tarakot, Laini, Nawarpani, and Dho Tarap.

Beyond Dho Tarap, we will be staying in the tented camps. The tents and food will all be carried by a porter and cooks. There will be an entire team for assistance as you stay in tented camps at Numa La Base Camp and Pelung Tang. After these two days, we shall again stay in Dolpo's tea house/ hotel from Dajok Tang. In villages such as Ringmo, Phoksundo Lake, Shyanta, and Jhupal, there's also an option to stay at a homestay. Homestay in Dolpo gives a close insight into local culture and provides an authentic trek experience.
